

Student Well-being: A Collective Responsibility

Annie Kidder

What is People for Education?

ANNIE KIDDER: We are an organization that's been around for more than 20 years. We're based in Ontario, though we work with people from across Canada. And our primary purpose is to make the connection between the health and strength of the country and the health and strength of our public education system.

So we shine a light on evidence, we conduct research ourselves, and we kind of build the public conversation about public education, part of it which includes advocacy, sitting at government policy tables, working to make sure that our public education system is graduating kids who can go on to lead happy, healthy, economically secure, civically engaged lives.
